A young person, mid-twenties, whom I accompany as a soul-friend asked, “You’re saying it’s possible I’m good enough just the way I am? That’s hard for me to believe. How come we never hear that message?” That conversation was two years ago during a telephone spiritual guidance exchange. I have not forgotten the question or my response.

Outer, external voices seek to influence and define our inner reality, informing us how we think and feel, what we expect and desire. We receive messages about how to appear through the way we dress and what we say, and even where our social action should—or shouldn’t—be placed. Images, words, and encounters can come from the media, strangers, or people we share a home with. The truth is, most of these words do not ring with accuracy. No one can define our inner reality, our own lived experience. It is a form of abuse when this occurs—a stealing of another person’s unique identity, personality, and a loss of the opportunity to validate dreams, hopes, fears, or life-given purpose and gifts.

Spiritual direction or spiritual guidance is a place and time to validate, explore, and discover the powerful human experience of connection, healing, and love.

That evening on the telephone I encouraged, “Perhaps you are good enough. Just like this, right now. You are, and I am. We all are. No matter the circumstance. Certainly we can always be better, and there is value in striving for more. But, today, right now, maybe you are good, enough.” With this particular seeker, questions about God or the Sacred Other was not part of our conversation. A deep sense of judgment and abandonment had created an angry soul-wound. My role was to put skin on compassion and care.

A few days after the conversation, I recalled “Wild Geese” a favorite poem by Mary Oliver from Dream Works (1994). Her opening lines shocked me. I invite you to tumble Oliver’s insight into your heart and body:

You do not have to be good. / You do not have to walk on your knees / for a hundred miles through the desert, / repenting. / You only have to let the soft animal of your body / love what it loves.

Cultivating Compassion

It is time to announce our place in the world, invite others in out of the cold to break bread, gather at our table, in our communities, at the workplace, in our schools, places of worship, and in our sacred circles. There is enough when we share with love. Let us love what we love, and love one another with welcoming presence. We all belong. This starting place is good, enough.

Reflect

Do I give myself permission to love what I love, feel what I feel?
Who can I invite in out of the cold to join me at my table?
What healing and hope can emerge through my heart of compassion and thanksgiving?
Am I good, enough?
Do I know when to say, “enough.”

Pegge Erkeneff

Sandhill Crane — Grus canadensis

SEEDS OF INTEREST:
- Field Guide: The Lost Art of Listening
- Poetry: Tightrope
- Book Review: God of Love: A Guide to the Heart of Judaism, Christianity and Islam
- Global Resources
- Ask Owl
listening is becoming a lost art. The information age and the revolution in technology are a mixed blessing, bringing awareness of our global community, and giving us the tools to communicate with each other twenty-four hours a day. They have also influenced how we learn to listen. In years past, most people ate dinner together, where they learned the art of communication, including listening. We also had more silence in public spaces—a time to listen. Even television and movies had more silence in them—a time to absorb and listen. However, watching television today offers poor examples of listening: interruptions, shouting, and lack of attention to the speaker.

Many of us are seduced by multi-tasking, trying to do at least two things at once. The research by neuroscientists, psychologists, and management professors suggests that our brains function better if we stay focused on one thing at a time. Multi-tasking slows us down and greatly increases the chance of mistakes, according to Dr. David E. Mayer, a cognitive scientist at the University of Michigan, USA.

As a result several new syndromes are emerging. One is called Continuous Partial Attention (CPA), described as when a person continues to e-mail, text message, and blog, while purportedly listening to someone else. Surfer’s Voice is another: talking or listening to someone on the telephone while continuing to surf the Internet, read e-mail, instant message, or text. Keyboard typing can be heard in the background. Absent Presence is another name for these syndromes. Ironically, constantly being accessible makes us inaccessible.

How do we restore the art of listening? To become a listening presence we need to prepare—not only to listen to others but also to listen to ourselves, and to that which is beyond words. Just as we take time to write, practice, and polish a speech, we need to take time to practice and prepare to listen. Three practices are essential elements of this discipline: cultivating silence, slowing down to reflect, and becoming present.

There is no listening without silence, and yet silence is often hard to come by in our society. It requires taking time to slow down and listen. It is similar to a farmer who allows the soil to be fallow for a time, plowing, yet not planting—only resting. Silence is how we nurture our capacity to listen.

Contemplative invitation: Take some time each day to practice being silent. There are all kinds of contemplative and meditative practices from which to choose, such as being at ease with silence, a practice that will transform your capacity to listen. You will find you have more space around you to hear those who are not like you or whose opinions you disagree with.

A simple practice: Stop, breathe deeply, and attend to the moment.

—Kay Lindahl lives in Long Beach, California, USA. She is the founder of The Listening Center, and co-founder of Women of Spirit and Faith. Author of The Sacred Art of Listening, Practicing the Sacred Art of Listening and How Does God Listen and co-editor of Women, Spirituality and Transformative Leadership: Where Grace Meets Power. Her e-mail address is TheListeningCenter@yahoo.com.
WALKING A SACRED PATH in Chartres, France
Hosted by the Reverend Dr. Lauren Artress

Cycle One: Passages: The Art of Life’s Transitions
June 4th-8th, 2012
with Gail Sheehy, journalist, lecturer and bestselling author

June 9th-10th, 2012
Veriditas Facilitator Training
2 day professional training with the Reverend Dr. Lauren Artress

June 10th, 2012
Meeting Mary
1 day workshop on the Sacred Feminine, with Judith Tripp

Cycle Two: Ancient Myths And Eternal Mysteries: Love And Death, Healing And Transformation
June 11th-15th, 2012
with Dr. Christine Downing, author and Professor of Mythological Studies at Pacifica Graduate Institute.
Special offering of additional lectures on the medieval mysteries of Chartres by Kayleen Asbo.

707-283-0373 | www.veriditas.org

Join us for a life-changing pilgrimage to one of the most sacred places on earth.

OBLATE SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
Master of Arts (Spirituality)

Our Master of Arts (Spirituality) aims to immerse the student in the deep wells of the Christian mystical tradition as well as have him or her conversant with contemporary developments within Spirituality. World-renowned authors, including Philip Sheldrake and Wendy Wright, among others highlight our faculty for this program.

– Ron Rolheiser, OMI (Author of The Holy Longing & President of Oblate School of Theology)

SUMMER 2012
FR. RON ROLHEISER, O.M.I., PH.D./S.T.D
Online Option Available
St. John of Cross: The Living Flame of Love
June 4-15, 2012

FR. JOE LABELLE, O.M.I., S.T.D.
Online Only
An Overview of the History of Christian Spirituality
August 20 - December 7, 2012

DR. MICHAEL W. HIGGINS, PH.D.
Online Option Available
Henri Nouwen: Genius Born of Anguish
June 18-29, 2012

FALL 2012
FR. JOE LABELLE, O.M.I., S.T.D.
Online Only
An Overview of the History of Christian Spirituality
August 20 - December 7, 2012

DR. WENDY WRIGHT, PH.D.
Online Only
Heart Speaks to Heart: Francis de Sales & the Salesian Spiritual Tradition
October 15 - December 7, 2012

For more information, contact
Cliff Knighten at (210) 341-1366 ext. 327 or cknighten@ost.edu

285 Oblate Drive • San Antonio, Texas 78216
(210) 341-1366 • www.ost.edu

A Spiritual Directors International publication
Listen
Tightrope

When I let go, I didn’t understand that letting go meant with both hands. So now I lay my palms up and open to the sky. A welcoming to that which will sift down from the clouds and fill me. Replace the aching hole with good enough. Which upon experience proves to be so much more.

A feast.
A feast that sticks like tender mortar into the cracks and wounds, heals the sad wail and gifts the soul with plenty.
Enough.
A feast.
A feast of Light and Spirit that threads through every cell and capillary to the point where all is whole, wanting for little and the little that is wanting is served with divinity as simple as putting one foot in front of the other and finding solidity where it was certain, just a moment ago, lay a gaping crevasse.
But I will not be swallowed. For there, instead, I find it.
Enough.
A feast.

Holding me in a sweet balance, the one I was searching for.

– Melissa Carta Miller [Pennsylvania, USA]
A feast.

Enough.

But I will not be swallowed. For there, instead, I find it.

where it was certain, just a moment ago, lay a gaping crevasse.

as simple as putting one foot in front of the other and finding solidity little and the little that is wanting is served with divinity capillary to the point where all is whole, wanting for

A feast of Light and Spirit that threads through every cell

A feast.

Enough.

heals the sad wail and gifts the soul with plenty.

A feast that sticks like tender mortar into the cracks and wounds,

A feast.

Which upon experience proves to be so much more.

the clouds and fill me. Replace the aching hole with good enough.

to the sky. A welcoming to that which will sift down from meant with both hands. So now I lay my palms up and open

When I let go, I didn't understand that letting go

Tightrope

God of Love: A Guide to the Heart of Judaism, Christianity and Islam by Mirabai Starr
Reviewed by Tessa Bielecki

This book made me laugh and weep.

It brought me to my knees in holy awe and led me into deep prayer.

It challenged not only my thinking but my behaviors. God of Love pays homage to the mystical and social justice teachings at the common core of the world’s great monotheistic religions: Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, focusing on what unifies rather than divides us.

Spiritual directors often grapple with the major themes presented here: faith and the “emptiness of unknowing,” stewardship of the earth, mercy and forgiveness, welcoming the stranger, “smashing idols,” loss and death, grief and woundedness, the “fire of global suffering,” balancing contemplation and action, the feminine face of God.

Author Mirabai Starr addresses these themes in fresh contemporary language that makes her work accessible to men and women, young and old, ardent practitioners and even smirking skeptics. Each chapter begins with what has become Starr’s signature: a compelling invocation that seduces us into the heart of the matter. The chapters then unfold with an overview of the theme from each tradition’s perspective; a memoir which vividly describes Starr’s personal engagement with the theme; and exemplars who embody the theme in their own lives in highly refined, rich, relevant, and uplifting ways.

We receive new insights into Abraham and the Prophets, Jesus and the Gospels, Hildegard of Bingham, Francis of Assisi, and other Christian mystics, the Baal Shem Tov, Esther “Etty” Hillesum, who refused to demonize the Nazis who murdered her, Sister Josephine Bakhita from the Sudan, and the remarkable Ted Waard from Taos, New Mexico, USA, who has suffered more losses than it seems possible any human being can bear.

It’s good for us to learn more about the holy ones of Islam: Rabia Al-Adawiyya, the Sufi ecstatic from eighth-century Iraq; Khidr, whom Muslims call “The Green One;” Sheikh Abdul Aziz Bukhair, co-founder of the Jerusalem Peacemakers (with Israeli Eliyahu McClean), who suffered an untimely heart attack in 2010 after almost sixty years of celebrating the interconnectedness among the Children of Abraham. I found the author’s treatment of Muhammad particularly sympathetic and inspiring.

Most importantly, this book points to the great need in our time for the interspiritual approach: sharing the mystic heart beating in the center of the world’s deepest spiritual traditions. Starr is uniquely poised to embody this approach. Her eloquent afterword, “Walking the Interspiritual Path,” gives us concrete suggestions for activating our own interspiritual quest.

Starr has a unique, vibrant, and deeply mystical voice. At long last we are hearing more of it after so many of her translations of the Christian mystics. It is refreshing to hear her name the fit of iconoclasm that has made us reject so much good from the monotheistic traditions and ultimately left us spiritually bankrupt. Starr recommends a more realistic approach: “In spite of the undeniable history of abuses committed in the name of religion, the monotheistic faiths offer innumerable points of access to the realm of love,” a “song” which all three traditions sing “in a deliciously different voice,” welcoming everyone to the table.

—Tessa Bielecki has been a spiritual guide for over forty years, formerly as Mother Abbess of the Spiritual Life Institute, and currently as co-director of the Desert Foundation based in Colorado, USA. Author of several books, at Sounds True you can find her six CD program, Wild at Heart: Radical Teachings of the Christian Mystics. She lives as a hermit in Crestone, Colorado, and her contact is Tessa@DesertFound.org.

Immaculate Heart Retreat Center

30 Day & 8 Day Ignatian Retreats
Beautiful Setting/ Fr. Armand Nigro, S.J.
Spokane, WA • July/Aug 2012
(509)448-1224
www.IHRC.net

4-Phase Ignatian Training Program in Spiritual Direction & Retreat Giving
Phase 1 beginning October 1 2012
Spiritual Directors’ Workshop
July 3-15 2012
Summer Practicum in Spiritual Direction
June 17-August 31 2012
40-Day Spiritual Exercises Institute
October 4-November 13 2012

Ignatius Jesuit Centre - Loyola House
Guelph Ontario Canada
www.loyolahouse.com | Phone 519.824.1250 ext. 266

A Spiritual Directors International publication
Retreats, Conferences, Sabbaticals in scenic western MA at:

Genesis Spiritual Life & Conference Center, Inc.

...Inspiration for the soul!
Experience hospitality.
Reconnect with nature.
Awaken your senses.
Restore your spirit.
Deepen your faith.
Practice peace.

Genesis is located on 19 wooded acres at the foothills of the Berkshire Mountains in western Massachusetts. Genesis offers an atmosphere of gracious hospitality and healing presence.

53 Mill St, Westfield, MA 01085 413.562.3627  www.genesiscenter.us
A ministry of Sisters of Providence

May 27-June 1, 2012
KANUGA CONFERENCE CENTER • HENDERSONVILLE, NC

Summer Dream & Spirituality Conference

KEY PRESENTATIONS INCLUDE:
Myth and Holy Scripture – Bishop Larry Maze
The Hero’s Journey – Pittman McGehee
The Paradox of Love – Pittman McGehee
Emergence of Sacred Feminine in Lives of Men & Women as Witnessed in Dreams – Diana McKendree
From Darkness to Light: The Egyptian Book of the Dead – Normandi Ellis
The Self and Mandala Motives in Dreams – Barbara Roukema-Koning
Tibetan Lucid Dreams – Jeremy Taylor

24+ workshops & 4 dream groups

FOR INFO & TO REGISTER ONLINE: www.HadenInstitute.com

NINE GATES MYSTERY SCHOOL

The Mystery School offers a rare opportunity for total immersion in two, nine-day residential courses. Its nine master teachers weave together the Druidic, tribal African, Native American, Sufi, mystic Christian, Hindu, Kabbalah, sacred sound and Tibetan Buddhist traditions.

SPRING SCHOOL 2012

PART 1: May 4-13, Lucerne Valley, CA
PART 2: September 21-30, Joshua Tree, CA

Youth Mystery School
SUMMER 2012, June 14-19, Medford, OR

We invite you to experience spirituality in these traditions—call 800-570-3782 x1960 or visit our website at www.ninegates.org

Volume 6, Issue 2

Seeking spiritual direction? Go to www.sdiworld.org
Question: How do I know when it is time to seek a new spiritual director? I’m afraid of offending my current spiritual guide, whom I care about. Yet, I have been experiencing a restlessness for several months. I do not eagerly anticipate our meeting times, and I yearn for something other than what I am experiencing now. We’ve been together for several years. I don’t know what to do.

Hoot Hoot: What a dilemma. Your spiritual director has companioned you for a long time, and in all likelihood, has listened to you well, and tenderly holds you and your story. He or she prays for you and has at one time been a person you eagerly anticipated meeting. (This is evident because you wrote that you no longer experience eager anticipation when you meet.) The crux or rub is a lack of freedom to engage a difficult conversation.

First off, it is the responsibility of a good spiritual guide to regularly provide a time to check in about how things are unfolding and growing. Even if you have met for years, this should still be in place. Because it isn’t, you may need to take the initiative when a session ends to take a deep breath and say, “Next time I would like to take part of our time to evaluate where you are, and where I am in the meeting time.” Leave it as simple as this. No additional explanation is necessary. Spend time reflecting about how it could be life-giving to stay, and what is life-giving to pursue with something or someone different. It could be that your life circumstances have changed, you need more challenge, or your interests and spiritual practice would benefit from a different spiritual guide. On the other hand, perhaps there is a gift in your spiritual guide knowing you and your story over a long period of time, and a surprise insight might be revealed in the difficult conversation.

Trust the process. Notice your inner promptings and sensations in your body. Pay attention to other events transpiring in your life. Give yourself permission to feel what you feel, and then be brave—share your experience and wrestling questions with your spiritual director. Spiritual direction is a safe place to speak truth. If it is not, it is not a healthy relationship, and indeed, it might be time to seek a new spiritual companion. Peace in your journey.

—if you have a question for Owl, please e-mail Listen@sdworld.org.
“Tending the holy around the world and across traditions ...
Al servicio de lo sacro alrededor del mundo y a través de las tradiciones ...”

—Translated by Marta Rios and Xavier Ortiz Monasterio

An Croí
(Gaelic for ‘The Heart’ and pronounced on cree)
Diploma in Spiritual Guidance

Two-year part-time program for those who feel called to develop their skills & understanding of the Art of Spiritual Guidance.
Holistic Creative Ecumenical &
Contemplative Approach

Begins the w/o July 16, 2012
Shrine of St. Joseph,
1050 Long Hill Rd., Stirling, NJ 07980
Contact: Ms. Patricia Hughes
An Croí Spiritual Guidance Program
908-647-0208
Email: pat@stshrine.org
Website: www.ancroi.ie

CREATION SPIRITUALITY:
WISDOM + SCIENCE + CREATIVITY = TRANSFORMATION

The Retreat Series Continues With Rev. Matthew Fox, Ph.D.
with Susan Coppage Evans, D.Min.
For more information visit:
www.wholeheartedretreat.com
303-279-9288
Boulder, Colorado

The Via Creativa
A Path of Birthing, Imagination and Passion
APRIL 20-22, 2012
Using the mystical voice of Hildegard of Bingen and Exploring Creativity and Feminine Aspects of Leadership

The Via Transformativa
A Path of Justice, Healing and Celebration
JULY 20-22, 2012
Using the mystical voice of Howard Thurman and Being the Change you Want to See in the World: Service and Social Action

Two Upcoming Opportunities to Study with Matthew Fox